PASTOR'S ARTICLE: CHANGES in the CHURCH OFFICE

You may have noticed there have been some changes in the church office! We are in the midst of reconfiguring the offices with three goals in mind: 1) Better communication and collaboration between staff, 2) more and better meeting spaces for the congregation, 3) improving the relevancy of our books.

In Kevin's final week at Faith, the Search Team interviewed him both about his recommendations in what to look for in a new Director of Worship and Music, but also in how we as a congregation could better support the next Director of Worship and Music. One of Kevin's suggestions that most surprised me was to reconfigure the staff offices. He noted that our current layout created a separation between me as the pastor and the rest of the staff and felt it resulted in missed opportunities for collaboration. As I reflected on his comments, I realized there was truth in them. It's not so much that the distance between the pastor's office and the rest of the staff is vast, it's that there are literal obstacles in the way of us seeing each other. I will admit that one of the obstacles is my personality. In the current arrangement, to see the other staff, I must walk past the front desk. There are inevitably wonderful people from our congregation checking in with Michael when I walk past and I want to stop and check in with these folks. It is a blessing to see the people, but suddenly, what was supposed to be a 5 minute conversation with Colter, has turned into a 15 minute conversation with someone who stopped by to pick up a poster. As a result, I have noticed in myself that I sometimes hide in my office instead of walking out to chat with the staff on a topic. But more than that, there is a truth to the saying, "Out of sight, out of mind." Particularly with Kevin, there were days when I simply wouldn't see him. We were both in the office, but he entered through a separate door and had no reason to pass by my office. Part of the magic of working with people comes in the moments when we bump into each other while we are thinking of something else, and excitedly share what's inspiring us. My hope is this new configuration will do just that: encourage Colter, Luke, and myself to bump into each other, to poke our heads around the corner to share what's inspiring us in the moment, to wander into each other's office to ask for advice. Hopefully you will see the fruit of this in worship, when our praise, our children, and the sermon intertwine to give deeper richness to all three.

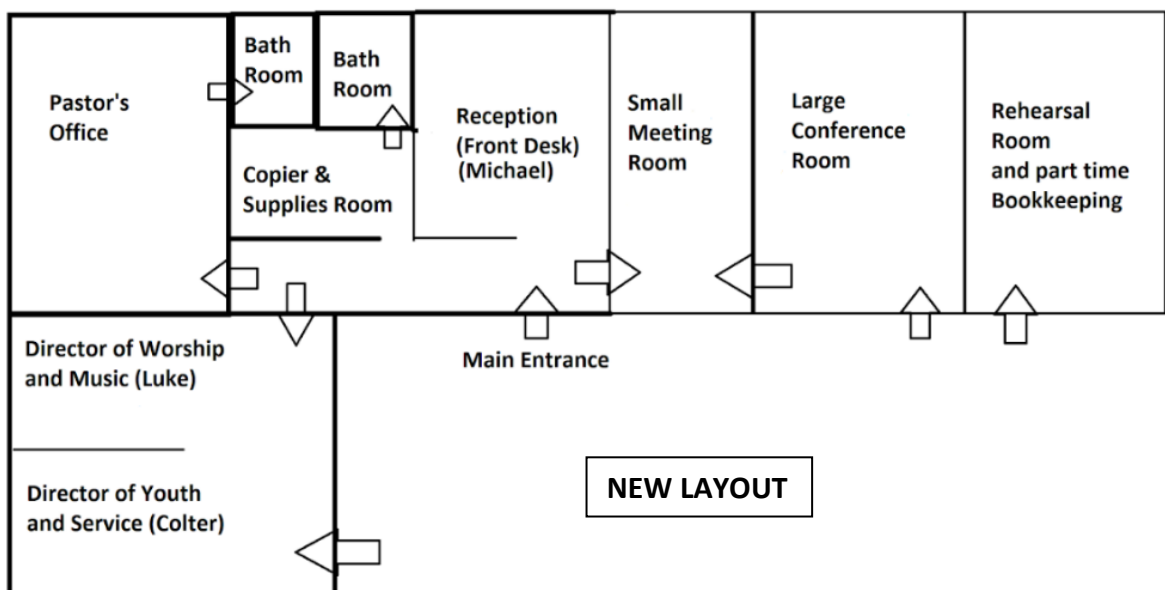

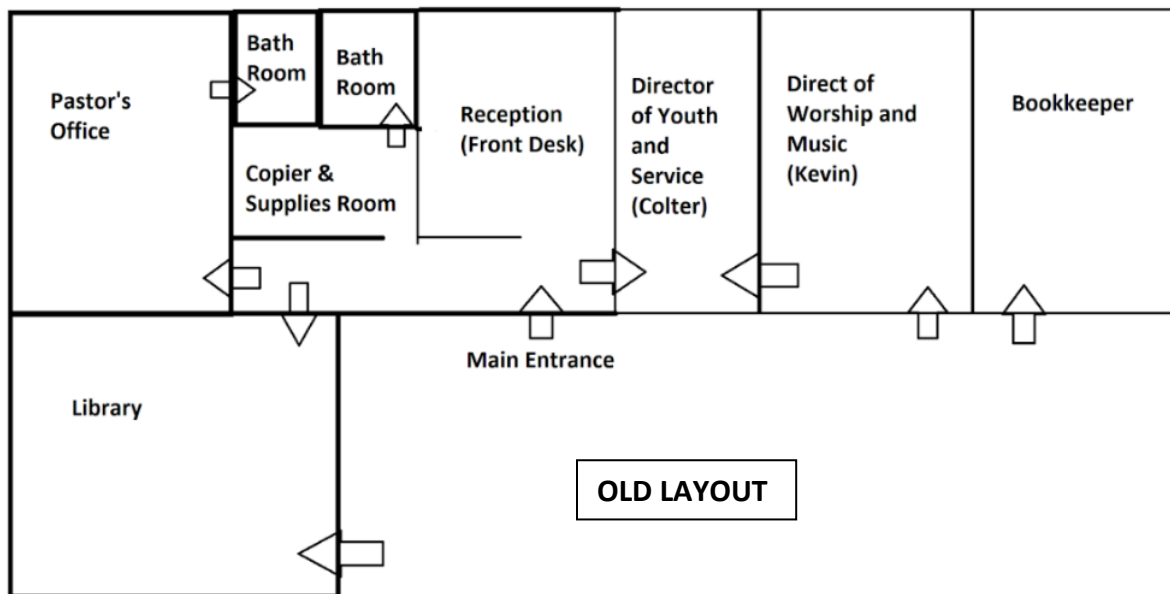

A second benefit of the reconfiguration is to provide more and better meeting spaces. More often Faith is having multiple meetings happening at the same time. Currently the library is the one space that feels both comfortable and professional. The goal is to create two spaces with that feeling. The first space would be in Kevin's former office. This would be a large conference room with a single table around which up to 16 people could fit. The second would be in Colter's old office. This room would be a smaller room designed for intimate conversations with no more than 6 people. As we transition, we will also be putting in new carpet and a fresh coat of paint to spruce up the spaces and give them a cozier feel. Ultimately, we'd like install a wall-mounted easy to use TV/computer in the large conference room for classes and video-conferencing.

The final benefit is to improve the relevancy of our books. The library had an incredible collection of books. And yet they were very rarely checked out. Part of the reason is that most people don't go into our library, and part of the reason is that when they were in the library, they were there for a meeting, not to peruse books. Our plan is select the books that we think are most use and place them where people will be most likely to think about their topic. For instance, we've selected what we think are the best of our children's books and moved them to the nurse's. We selected what we think are the best of the books on the bible and Christian history, and we will move them to the large conference room where bible study will take place. We selected the best books related to spiritual care topics, like grief and prayer, and we will put them in the small meeting room where those intimate conversations will happen. The goal is, when people see books, they will see just the books they need in that moment. Hopefully, that will encourage people to take the books home and read them.

Laura Moravec and Joel Zimbelman have already done a great job of assembling a crew of folks from Faith to start these transitions. It will likely be a few more weeks before they are all finished. Thank you ahead of time for your patience as we renovate, and I encourage you to keep your eyes open for the improvements in staff collaboration, meeting spaces, and books catching your attentions.

Your Brother in Christ,
Pastor Ben Colahan

Each week a different congregation will bring soup to Faith Lutheran at 6pm, and then lead worship in the style of their own tradition at 7pm. March 4th through April 1st. If you would like to be a part of providing hospitality for our guest congregations by setting the tables in the parish hall and helping set out the soups that they bring, please visit www.mealtrain.com/faithchico or see the sign up sheet in the parish hall.

F.A.C.E. CLASSES this MONTH

The Equipping Church

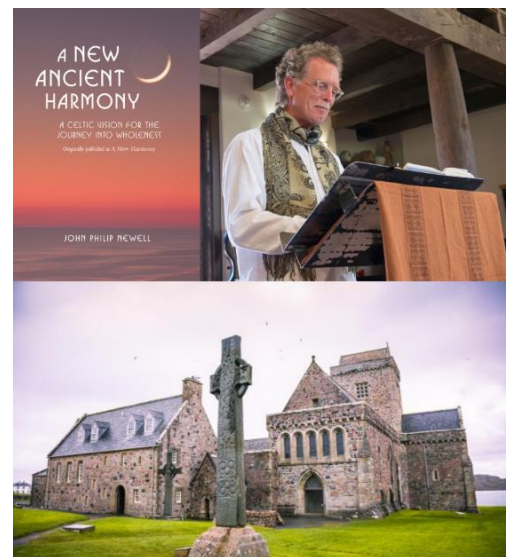

Join the Equipping Ministry Team and Kim Schweder for a discussion of this exciting vision of life, involvement, and gift-sharing at Faith Lutheran Church. If you are asking yourself “where can I serve most effectively in this wonderful community and experience the fullest life possible living out the Gospel” these two introductory sessions may be just what the doctor ordered!

New Member’s Class Starting March 1

Are you curious about where the Lutheran tradition comes from and what it teaches? Are you interested in becoming a member of Faith Lutheran? Then be a part of the New Members Class with Pastor Ben starting Sunday, March 1st! Class will be after worship (11am-noon). The class will last six weeks and at the end, if you decide you'd like to officially join, we'll have a celebration to introduce you on the Easter Vigil on April 11th. We would like to pair each potential new member with a current member to act as their sponsor and mentor. If you are interested in being part of the class, please contact Pastor Ben at colahanb@gmail.com so that he can pair you with a mentor.

John Philip Newell’s A New Ancient Harmony: A Celtic Vision for the Journey into Wholeness on March 15, 22, 29 and April 5

In a world that seems increasingly fragmented, Newell calls us to a vision of life's essential oneness. He invites us to be part of a new ancient harmony focusing on creation's sacredness and unity. A New Ancient Harmony works out a vision and a pathway toward transformation in our lives and world. Bill Kees, our session leader, has studied Newell’s work and participated in various Newell-led workshops in the past. This is a perspective and vision of the Christian way that will be new to a lot of folks! Books will be on sale in February after the Sunday Morning Service.

Future 2020 FACE Classes: Rise Against Hunger, and May’s annual meeting.

MINISTRY of the MONTH

As a way to invite all of us to use the gifts that God has so graciously given us, we have started “Ministry/ministries of the month.” This is one way to describe some of the ways we practice our gifts. This a way to recognize and show all these ministers how much we appreciate their hard work. Listen to the prayers and pray with us for all those many children of God who are doing his work, and if you feel like that work is something you might like to do then please join us.

Lectors

I always read to my children at bedtime and sometimes they would look at the pictures and tell me the story. I still love to read to my grandchildren and they pay such close attention, I think they memorize each word. One of the really - ways to minister to the congregation is to read our stories every Sunday; stories of God creating the world, stories of how we make sure we humans came to be, stories of God walking with each of us, stories of how God promises to take care of us.

Is reading aloud one of your passions? Do you miss telling stories to God’s children (that means us)? Have you thought about becoming a Lector? Come and join us story tellers! It is awesome to look out at the congregation and watch the faces listening attentively to God’s stories of unconditional LOVE!

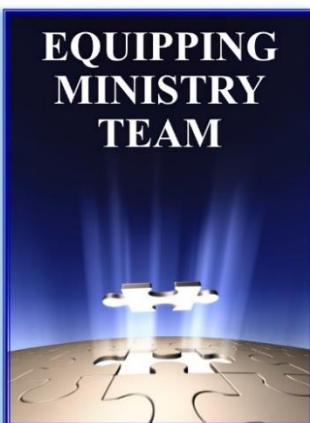

Sacristans

“Sacristan - the person in charge of the Sacristy and its contents.” Ok but what do they do? They are the behind- the-scenes event planner! They make sure the table is set with the appropriate paraments. They make sure that the hall is decorated with colorful banners. They make sure the wine and bread are ready for the great feast. The help the servers to know where to be and what to do. And they are rewarded by seeing/knowing how well everyone enjoyed the feast! We truly applaud these great organizers!

If this is a gift that you would like to explore, please talk to Molly Barnum.

We also have a second crew of people in the sacristy who clean up after communion. They make sure all the dishes are washed and lovingly put away. They ensure that the remaining bread and wine is not lost, and that everything is put in its place ready for the following week. This crew is led by Becky Dyck. If this is a gift that you would like to explore, please chat with Becky, you can find her in the sacristy after worship!

EQUIPPING MINISTRY NEWS

EQUIPPING TEAM ON THE MOVE!

So much exciting news from Faith’s Equipping Team it’s hard to know where to start!

The Equipping Team will be hosting the F.A.C.E. class on March 1st and March 8th. If you have heard anything at all about the Equipping Team and are wondering what is the big picture? Set these dates aside to come and meet the team and learn more about its direction.

Welcome Table: The Equipping team along with an impressive list of volunteers will be hosting a welcome table starting on Ash Wednesday and running every Sunday through Lent.

Pastor Ben challenged the congregation to use the “faith practice” of welcoming the stranger. May showed interest in this and we will now have people outside welcoming both visitors and regular attenders to Faith. This promises to be a great community building ministry! (who knows? It might last beyond Easter)

Name Tags: New nametags that will be engraved with the names of each attender to Faith are right around the corner. A team is working on size and design and they should be arriving prior to Easter. The Equipping Team understands that many of you have been around for a while and know all the names. However, how great it will be to see those names we might accidentally forget for a moment or for the visitor not to find themselves on “name overload”, or for all attending worship to receive communion by first name. The team is also working on a “system” that makes it as easy as possible to pick up your nametag and easily return it. Look for more information sometime soon!

The list of things to do goes on and on mainly, we believe, by the direction of the Holy Spirit but also the contagious enthusiasm of team members.

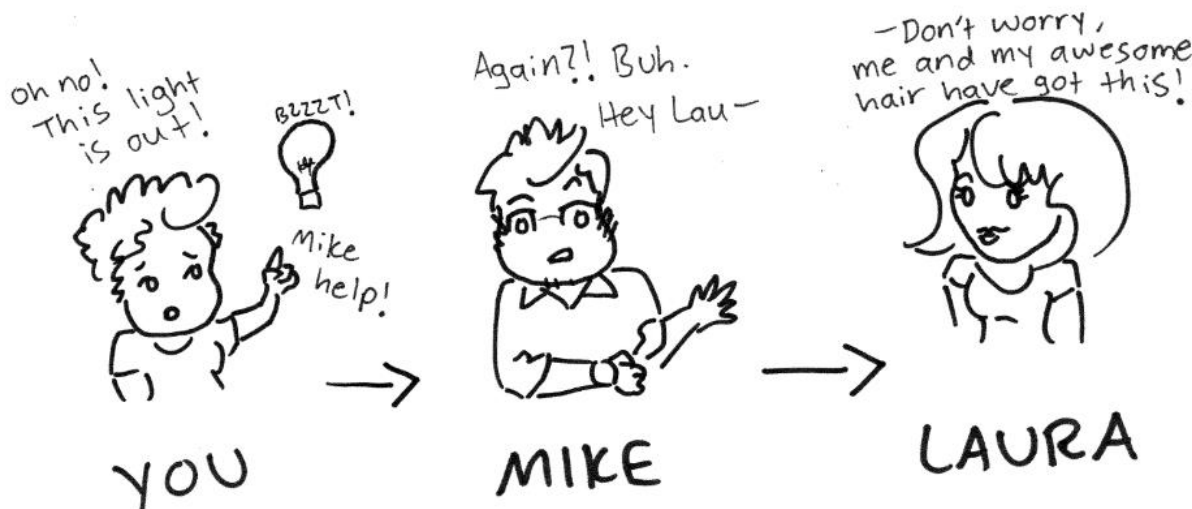

PROPERTY and FACILITIES MANAGEMENT

Lights go out. Keys don’t fit right. Doors want to stay open even though you’ve shut them 15 times. And sometimes, you come into church and the stove is missing entirely. These things happen (some more unexpectedly than others) and with facilities renovations underway, keeping a handle on our facility’s needs can be difficult for staff, council, and members alike. Laura Moravec has graciously taken on the volunteer role as Faith Lutheran Church Property Manager; we were going to make her our official sexton but, quote: “nobody knows what that is, Michael.”

There was a time when people looked to me and asked, “So are you the office or facilities manager?” and I would look around and answer, “uhhhhhhhh... yes???” and gesture vaguely around the room. Now thanks to Laura, the two of us can more effectively address things like the lights and doors and stove (which is back in the kitchen, hallelujah!)

If you have questions, concerns, or comments about our facility, bring it to me at the desk. If it’s something that needs attention, I will pass it on to Laura. Thank you all for the love and care you consistently pour into our beautiful facility!

Michael, OFFICE manager!

THE TRIP REPORT: INTERGENERATIONAL SNOWSHOEING NEAR LASSEN VOLCANIC NATIONAL PARK

Welcome to the twelfth edition of The Trip Report, a monthly briefing on youth and intergenerational events. This month, I will share about a recent intergenerational snowshoe trip in Lassen National Forest.

I'm no stranger to a little snow. I grew up in the mountains, skiing and ice fishing and hiking during the coldest months of the year. Snow has a way of transforming a landscape into something magnificent and quiet. Spending time in the snow has a way of transforming our attitudes as well.

However, it's not every person that feels as comfortable around the white fluffy stuff as I do. With that in mind, I once again penciled in a snowshoe trip up by Lassen as one of our monthly youth/intergenerational events, in hopes that a few snow "rookies" would be game to trust me to lead them on a journey. As the day of the trip got closer, the sign up list grew longer and the excitement was building.

We met in the church parking lot on a Saturday morning and loaded all of our snow gear and snowshoe equipment into vehicles. As Ralph Godwin mentioned to me, snowshoe technology has improved quite a bit since the days of fur trappers and mountain men. Aluminum and PVC have replaced hardwoods and leather. I'm grateful for these modern advances, which make snowshoeing less clumsy and tiresome. The forecast promised rain, but thankfully it wasn't supposed to start until the afternoon. Our drive from Chico to the snowshoe area was pleasant (I rode with Penny and Tom Melvin and Vicki Doeden), and the roads were dry. Some very light rain began to fall as we neared the parking lot, but it wasn't heavy and it wasn't terribly unpleasant.

Once we arrived at our trailhead, I remarked to Pastor Ben how different the place looked with a bit less snow than last year. He replied, "This is definitely a different place than where we went last year," and after further investigation, he was indeed correct. However, the trail looked doable and we had the place to ourselves, so we decided to try this new location.

Folks began piling out of their vehicles and putting on all manner of winter attire. With everyone looking suited for a couple of hours in the snow, I did a brief safety talk and overview of snowshoe technique with the group. Then, everyone picked out their snowshoes, which were in a row according to each snowshoe pair's surface area. I was pleased to see that we had enough snowshoes for everyone, and that everyone had snowshoes that fit them well.

With explicit instructions to leave the clean, unmarred cross country ski tracks alone, our crew promptly tramped all over them and made a mess of the trail. I suppose some instructions are worth saying several times over, and I prayed future skiers at this site would forgive us for our trail transgressions.

I hit my stride alongside Nelson and Sandra Hayashida, whose granddaughter Lili'u was far ahead on the trail with one of her friends, Dela, from school. Both Nelson and Sandra had never tried snowshoeing before, but they were naturals! I enjoyed getting to know them, both having journeyed throughout the U.S. to some spectacular mountains I have never been to before, like the Teton Range. Nelson described seeing the massive mountains reflected on a perfectly still lake. I hope one day to go see this myself!

Further ahead on the trail, I caught up with Ryan Manes, his son James, and his daughter Hope. Both of his children were having a blast, throwing snowballs and blazing their own trails alongside the main road. I felt they really understood the amazement of snowshoeing: where once they would have sunk through the snow to the ground, they could walk! James made friends with Lili'u and Dela, and their laughter could be heard echoing throughout the forest as they played in the snow. For such a young snowshoer, I was impressed with how far Hope was able to go. Her resilient attitude and excitement for an adventure brought me new life.

After some time, members of our party began to turn around and make their way downhill, back to the vehicles for some lunch. I pulled out my large thermos of hot chocolate, and Pastor Ben and Annalisa Koch added their cocoa thermos to the mix as well. Between all of us, there was enough sweet chocolatey goodness for everyone to have a cup. What a great thing to share! And, the cocoa wasn't the only thing being shared. Nelson and Sandra brought some delicious spam musubi with them, which includes the usual ingredients for sushi but replaces the fish with spam instead. It was delicious! Ryan gave me a few pieces of homemade jerky, which was also quite tasty. Sharing food with one another, in a community with a wide range of ages, and after all of us had worked up an appetite, was one of the best parts of the day.

With rain looming and the small droplets becoming a bit larger, our group opted to skip the second hike after lunch and return home instead. Tom drove us back to Chico safely, and Ryan met me at Mountain Sports with the snowshoes and poles in the back of his truck. Wet, tired, and happy, I returned home, giving thanks to God for a wonderful day in the mountains!

Have an adventure-worthy idea for an upcoming youth/intergenerational event? Interested in becoming involved with Faith Lutheran's youth? Colter would love to hear from you! colter.g.murphy@gmail.com
